International Judicial Dissent: Causes and Consequences

Wednesday, 16 December 2015, 16:00

Professor Mark A. Pollack

Temple University, Philadelphia

Mark A. Pollack's is Professor of Political Science and Law and Jean Monnet Chair at Temple University. His research agenda focuses on the role of international institutions and international law in regional and global governance. His past research has examined the delegation of powers to the supranational organizations in the European Union, governance of the transatlantic relationship, the global regulation of genetically modified foods, and the "mainstreaming" of gender and environmental issues in international organizations. His current research includes a research project (with Jeffrey Dunoff) on international judicial dissent, as well as a forthcoming symposium (in the International Journal of Constitutional Law) and a book project on the United States' ambivalent support for international law.

Professor Jeffrey Dunoff

Temple University, Philadelphia

Jeffrey L. Dunoff is the Laura H. Carnell Professor of Law at Temple Law School. His research focuses on public international law, international regulatory regimes, international courts, international organizations, and interdisciplinary approaches to international law. He has served as a Visiting Professor at Harvard Law School and at the Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton University. Among other activities, he is an editor of Global Constitutionalism, a member of the E 15 Expert's Group on the Functioning of the Multilateral Trading System, an elected member of the American Law Institute, and a Fellow of the American Bar Foundation. His current research, with Mark Pollack, a political scientist at Temple University, focuses on international courts and tribunals.
